

With your support the Friends will help the National Army Museum care for the heritage of the British Army and explain the values that soldiers have fought and died for.

Your friendship brings others

- Exhibitions
- Event weekends
- Research opportunities and facilities
- Family activities
- An interactive website resource
- Free school and group educational sessions
- Conferences and lectures
- An understanding of the heritage of the British Army and the values that soldiers have fought and died for, explored through over 6 million objects

There has never been a more exciting time to be involved with the National Army Museum as a Friend. The Museum is embarking upon an ambitious programme of development that will see its galleries transformed over the next few years. We need your help to achieve our vision.

Photographs in this leaflet show some of the ways in which the generous assistance of our Friends has helped the Museum.

"The Friends' importance to this Museum does not rest solely on their generous donations. To us, they represent a body of enthusiastic and loyal supporters who are able to act as the Museum's ambassadors to the rest of the world, endorse and broadcast the work we do, and help us to generate more supporters like them. It is this support that will be invaluable to us as we move forward in 2008 with our ambitious development plan."

We are a Society run for and by people who choose to demonstrate their support for the purpose and work of the National Army Museum. Every year, objects such as those shown on this leaflet are purchased with the help of Friends' funds, helping the Museum generate a wider interest in, and understanding of, the history of Britain's army, and its relevance to the world that we live in today.

We aim to

- increase awareness and appreciation of the National Army Museum
- raise funds to help the Museum achieve its aims
