

How To Draw...

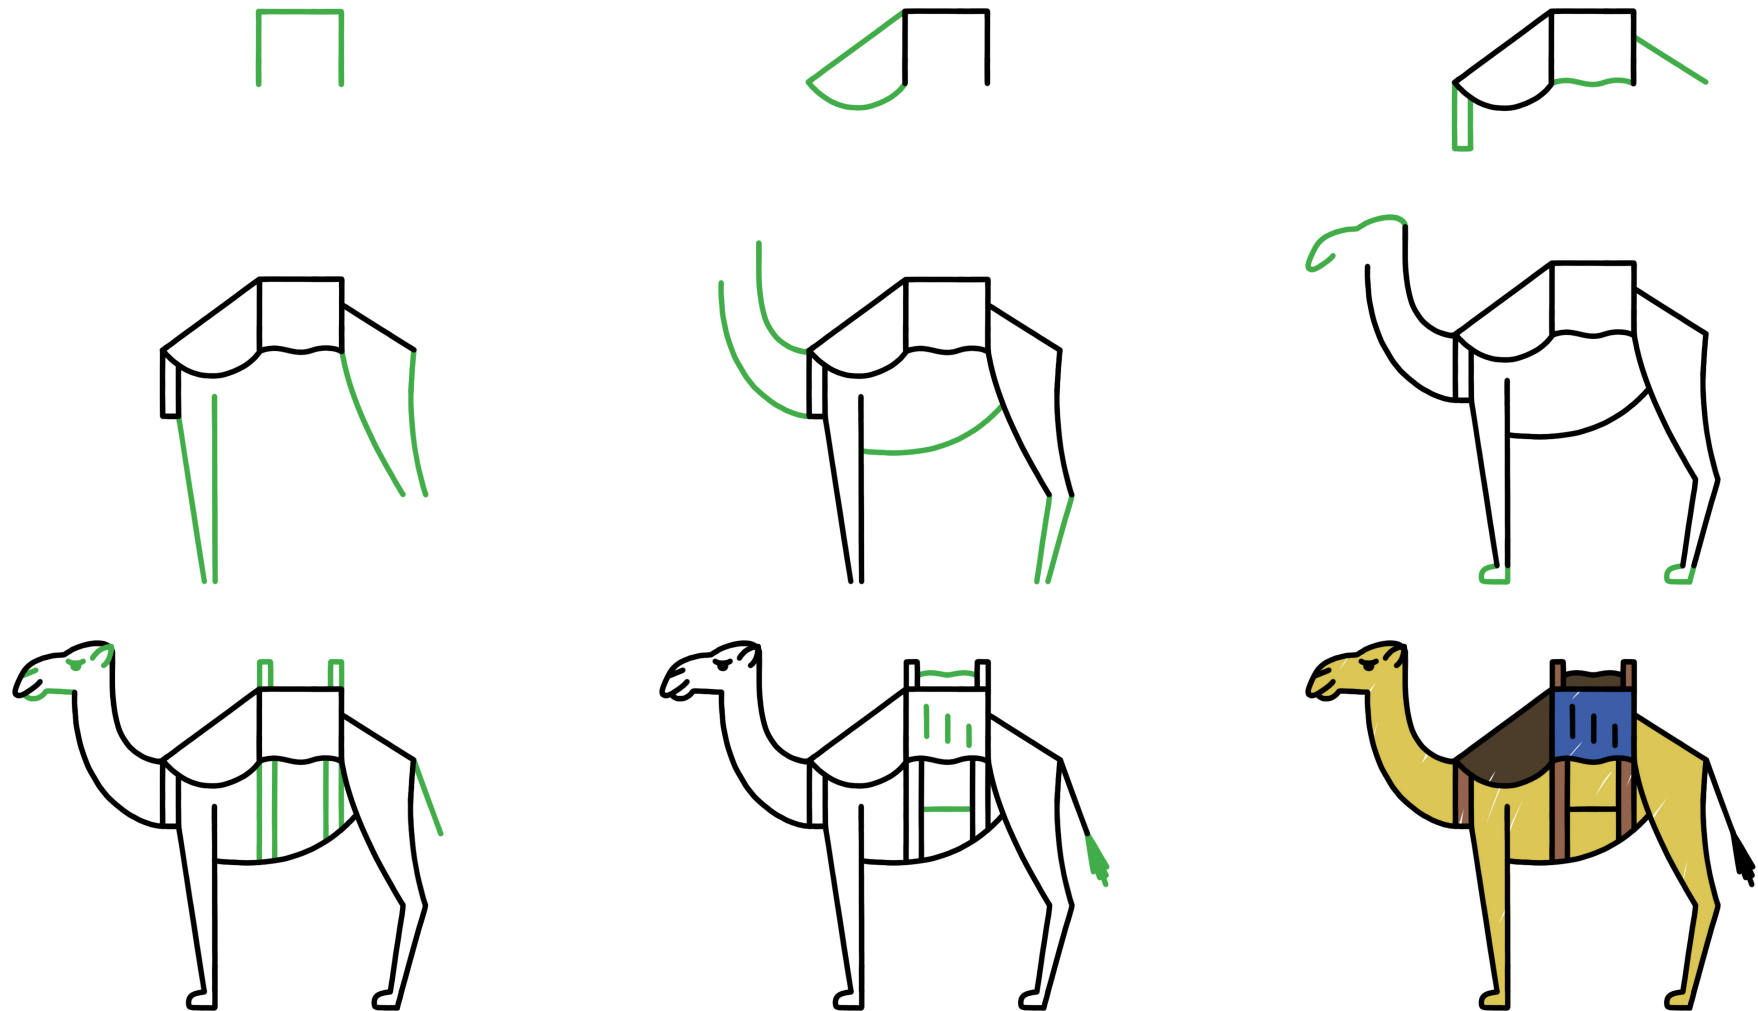

A Wolseley Helmet!

This is a lightweight helmet covered in cloth, designed to keep you cool under the hot sun. The helmets were originally white but soldiers dyed them using tea to help them blend into the desert landscape. These helmets were worn from the Victorian times all the way through to the Second World War.

How To Draw... A Camel!

The Imperial Camel Corps was formed during the First World War and used in the African desert. Camels worked well for desert warfare because they could carry heavy loads and go days without water.

How To Draw... A Pink Panther!

NATIONAL ARMY MUSEUM

The Army used Land Rovers painted pink during the 1960s and 1970s. Nicknamed the 'Pink Panther', the colour helped the vehicle blend in where the sand was a pinkish colour. The camouflage worked best in the light of dawn or dusk.
