Try our quiz to see if you have what it takes to survive in the jungle

You spot a mysterious plant with tasty looking fruit, they are red in colour.

Unsure what it is, you decide to give it a miss and continue your way.

Eat it- what is the worst that could happen?

Oh no, that was poisonous! You have an upset tummy for the next few days. Return to start.

Travelling through the jungle is thirsty work! You notice you are running out of water...

You fill your bottle up from a nearby stream.

You ration the water you have left and fold a leaf into a cup shape to collect water droplets overnight.

You forgot to boil the water to purify it, you end up feeling very unwell. Return to start.

You rub the leech with ash from last night's fire. Leeches do not like ash! It causes it to stop biting and fall off, with no risk of infection. Good work!

When you wake up you notice a leech hanging from your ankle!

Pull it off quickly!

The leech's teeth are still attached to your skin, this will become itchy and inflamed. Return to start.

It has been another long day in the jungle, and you need to make camp for the night.

You decide to make camp in a dry riverbed, it is already clear of plants and trees.

Bad idea, the riverbed may look dry, but a storm could flood your camp in a few hours! Return to start.

Clearing the ground and lighting a fire will keep insects away and make the camp comfortable.

You decide to clear an area of leaves and branches and get a fire going as soon as possible.

Well done, you've survived the jungle and completed the quiz!
